Administrative history / Biographical sketch

Note

Prior to Wages for Housework's demise, in the mid-1970s a group of lesbians which had belonged to it created a new organization, Wages Due Lesbians (also known as Wages Due). Their policies were much the same, however, their emphasis was on the rights of lesbian mothers. Their constitutional difference was that: "Wages for Housework recognizes that doing cleaning, raising children, taking care of men, is not women's biological destiny. Lesbianism recognizes that heterosexual love and marriage is not women's biological destiny. Both are definitions of women's roles by the state and for the advantage of the state." (Lesbians Organize, Toronto, Ontario, 1977)

The Wages Due Lesbians organization campaigned to have housework recognized as work and demanded the right to have relationships with other women. They also made demands to the government for paid daycare, so that lesbian women could work and keep their children. As with Wages for Housework, they were highly involved in campaigns, rallies and publishing articles on women rights and in particular lesbian mothers' rights. The organization seems to have disbanded by the early 1980s.

Custodial history

This fonds was donated to the University of Ottawa Archives and Special Collections in 1993 along with the Toronto Wages for Housework Committee fonds and Lesbian Mothers' Defence Fund fonds.

Scope and content

The Wages Due Lesbians fonds contains mostly textual records and one poster. It contains administrative documents as well as reports on conferences, speeches from demonstrations, correspondence with related organizations, summaries and reports on child custody cases, as well as articles and newspaper clippings.
